Lemon Grove woman called to serve her country in the Gulf

By Lisa Parsons

Private First Class Amber Lafferty served 20 months with the United States Army, went into the Army Reserve and assumed her duty to Uncle Sam would be finished uneventfully on the weekends, but due to the actions of Saddam Hussein, that's not the way it worked out.

Lafferty was given notice just before Christmas that she was back on active duty with the 129th Evac Hospital and should be prepared to be shipped out any day. She left her job with Excaliber Security Company where she was a security guard for Teledyne Ryan and prepared to resume her position with the U.S. Army as a records keeper.

"Christmas was an absolute wreck," said Lafferty's mother, Ann Hale, who owns Permanent Solutions Hair Salon in Lemon Grove. "We didn't know when she was leaving, so we had Christmas early, then she wasn't shipped out, so we had another Christmas. Actually, she did pretty well," laughed Hale.

Lafferty shipped out on the 15th of January from Travis Airforce Base. "It was awful," said Hale. "We thought she was either in the air or had just landed when Bush's deadline passed."

But Lafferty stopped in Frankfurt, Germany for four days and didn't reach Saudi Arabia until January 19th. "When she called," said Hale, "she said she saw Scuds being intercepted by Patriot missiles."

Hale admits that she was "dysfunctional" the first few days after her daughter left, but that the stress is dying down now. "My attitude is wonderful now because I've given my problems back to the Lord and I'm now leaving it up to him. I know he's in control."

Lafferty, who graduated from Helix High School in 1987, has wanted to be in the Army since she was nine-years-old, according to her mother. "I don't know why," Hale said. "Her father wasn't in the military and it's not a tradition in the family..." she paused a minute and then laughed, "Well, yes I do, she likes the uniform."

Lafferty told her mother over the phone that the morale of the troops in Saudi Arabia was good. Hale said that hometown support was very important to her daughter and other service personnel. "She wants to know that she's doing something worthwhile," said Hale, who has an American flag, a yellow ribbon and a picture of her daughter in uniform tacked up to the mirror in her shop. "Now I'm just waiting for her to come home...and she will."

California water shortage reaching disaster stage

By Paul Treske

The combined water storage of the Oroville and San Luis reservoirs in Northern California is now under one million acre-feet. Ordinarily, at this time of year, the reservoirs hold 3 million acre-feet of water or more. When it is realized that these two areas comprise the total storage for the California State Water Project which now provides 50 percent of Southern California water, the size of the state's imminent water crisis becomes clear. Added to this, according to Helix Water District Manager Bob Friedgen, there is currently no water from runoff flowing into the reservoirs from the High Sierras.

As a result Friedgen predicts that the 15 percent conservation put into effect by the Metropolitan Water District on Febraury 1 will be followed by a rise to 22 percent by March 1. Friedgen adds that a 30 percent mandatory water use reduction by summer is a strong possibility if there is not significant rain during the remainder of the winter.

Salvation, according to Friedgen, lies more in the rain and snow in the Sierras than in precipitation here. To date, the Sierras have received only 20 percent of their average precipitation.

The accompanying chart indicates that, even at its depths, the drought year of 1976-1977 did not reach current levels. Friedgen

Obituary

Well-known Grossmont College pioneer and Director of Campus Business Katherine "Kathy" Braun, died Friday, January 18, at her La Mesa home, from complications related to lung cancer diagnosed last summer.

A memorial service was held at 10 a.m. January 24 at the First United Methodist Church in Mission Valley. Interment was at Ramona Cemetery in Ramona.

Born in Plymouth, Wisconsin, she worked for General Motors and Title Underwriters, Inc., in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, before moving to Anaheim, California in 1956, where she worked briefly for Hallamore Electronics before moving to the San Diego area.

In 1958, she was employed by the Grossmont Union High School District business office. Harold G. Hughes, former Deputy Superintendent of Grossmont Union High School District and President Emeritus of Grossmont College, reached at his home on the island of Kauai, Hawaii, remembered Kathy Salazar-Braun and her work at the high school district, and later at the college.

"She had a lot of ability and was given increasing responsibility. The high school district was undergoing tremendous growth and she was promoted to assist in facilities planning which involved enrollment projection, planning for the construction of new high schools, site acquisition, and working with faculty committees on facilities."

The college district was formed in 1969 with the same governing board as the high school, Therefore, the high school facilities planning office became responsible for the construction of the first increment of Grossmont College, which began Kathy Braun's long involvement with Grossmont College, explained Hughes. After the campus was opened in 1964, Braun was transferred to Grossmont College, where in a short while she became the campus business manager.

"I would like to express my sincere appreciation for the opportunity to have worked with Kathy as a colleague for so many years. We shared a common devotion to the principles of community college education and her contributions to the success of Grossmont College should never be under estimated. Her devotion to duty, her pride in her work, her knowledge and understanding of both her job and the people with whom she worked set her way above most colleagues," Hughes said.

Her many honors include Twin Honoree Tribute to Women and Industry by the YWCA of San Diego in 1986. She was the recipient of the highest award accorded by Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District, the Harold G. Hughes Award, as well as the highest award of the Associated Students of Grossmont College, the Golden Griffin Award. As a surprise highlight of the Grossmont College commencement of 1990, she was awarded a special citation by the presidents of the Associated Students, The Academic Senate and Grossmont College. In 1975, she was honored by the Grossmont College Teachers Association for professional excellence.

She was an active member of the El Cajon Soroptomists. For a long time, she sang with her husband's musical groups, the Dick Braun Orchestra and the Dick Braun Big Band. She also taught business courses at Grossmont College and Santana Adult School.

Survivors include her husband, Richard W. Braun of La Mesa; daughters Lorrie Cudd of Madera, Shirley Horn of Fallbrook, Susan Cunningham of La Mesa; sons Bert Salazar of Fallbrook, Bill Braun and Doug Braun of La Mesa; and mother, Cora Scheffler of EL Cajon.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Katherine Braun Scholarship Fund which may be sent of the Financial Aid Office, Grossmont College, El Cajon, CA 92020.

Lemon Grove optometrist on special assignment in Italy

In mid-January, Dr. Robert B. Sanet left his Lemon Grove optometric office and flew 6,500 miles across the Atlantic to Milan, Italy to head the city's first professional volleyball sports vision enhancement program. Sanet's experience working with numerous professional players including former San Diego Padre Ozzie Smith and Olympic athletes including the 1984 U.S. Mens' Olympic Volleyball team landed him this project.

"The '84 and '88 teams dominated the world championships and also brought home two Olympic Gold Medals," said Sanet, co-director at the San Diego Center for Vision Care in Lemon Grove, and director of the Sports Improvement Center in San Diego. "Doug Beal, the U.S. head coach then, was very impressed with my work and is now Milan's head coach. He basically wants me to bring the same team benefits to Milan."

The premise behind sports vision enhancement is that athletic performance is closely linked with visual skills. Specialists believe 40 to 60 percent of all athletic problems are visual in origin.

Sanet will evaluate the players' visual abilities, measuring dynamic visual acuity, the ability to track a moving object through space, as well as depth perception, peripheral awareness and eye-hand coordination. He will then prescribe training regiments according the the individual needs of each athlete. During his stay, he will teach an Italian optometrist the latest techniques so he may treat the athletes until he returns.

Sanet is currently working with the U.S. Mens and Womens National Volleyball teams based in San Diego. He has received numerous awards recognizing his achievements in the areas of learning-related vision problems and sports vision enhancement including the Ralph Barstow Intenational Award for Excellence in Optometric Practice in 1986 and San Diego County Optometrist of the Year in 1989.

He is scheduled to return to Lemon Grove on February 11.

Great American Bank transformed into Wells Fargo

Great American Bank may have changed its name and gotten a new sign, but customers will be glad to see many familiar faces in what is now Wells Fargo Bank in Lemon Grove.

Branch Manager Reggie Davis is still at the helm and he said the only personnel change at the Lemon Grove Branch is an increase of five new people.

Dan Conway, a spokesperson for Wells Fargo said they made employment offers to every employee in the Great American branch bank system. "We believe in the value of the Great American team and their customer service skills," he said.

The branch transformations occurred during the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday weekend during which 600 signs were changed, along with several other cosmetic makeovers. Great American's computer system was altered to match up with Wells Fargo's, including the switchover of all the ATM's. Great American customer's ATM cards and code numbers will still work on the Wells Fargo system through the first part of February, but Wells Fargo suggests its new customers apply for a new ATM card as soon as possible.

Of the 64 Great American branches, 57, or 90%, will be retained, and 20 of 26 Wells Fargo branches will be kept.

Benefits Analysts honored

The San Diego Department of Social Services honored 1,000 Benefits Analysts at eleven separate ceremonies January 24, 1991. Similar recognition events were held statewide in recognition of these workers, who daily face the stress of helping the neediest of citizens.

The week of January 21-24 was devoted to recognizing these workers, who help persons who qualify for assistance in the form of cash, food stamps and Medi-Cal cards.

The activities planned in San Diego County included two days of seminars, team-building events, presentation of certificates by the department director, a benefits analysts' bowl and a luncheon.

Benefits Analysts are responsible for handling the daily procedures that enable needy people to receive federal, state and county assistance. There are 225,000 persons in the county receiving help in the form of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), food stamps, Medi-Cal and General Relief. Over 15,500 application are processed per month and over $11,000,000 per week is issued in financial aid.

Terry Jenkins, a Benefits Analyst for the Lemon Grove District Office, is representative of this profession. He has worked for the department for three years and is responsible for managing the monthly financial allocations to 1,700 families that qualify under the AFDC program.

Richard W. Jacobsen, director of the Department of Social Services said, "Benefits Analysts such as Terry Jenkins represent the front line of the department. Terry are the unrecognized workers who keep needy persons from becoming homeless."

Jenkins is highly respected for his commitment to the individuals he serves as well as to his coworkers. He is a member of the Lemon Grove House Committee and was part of the founding team that established the Lemon Grove Office in June 1990.

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Water pipeline vs. Highway 125

Criticism is not always spirit-lifting, but it is healthy and is welcomed. The recent piece on the proposed state highway 125/54 brought a very pointed question.

"Where is your patronizing attitude that you showed toward the water pipeline project in an earlier issue?" A very good question, indeed.

I certainly confess to being more apologetic toward the water pipe project that the Highway 125 extension. The reason is that I feel very strongly that they are two totally different entities. We all know how much we need the water with the drought conditions and the rapidly deteriorating condition of the present pipeline and its inadequacy for our present and future population. The pipeline just happens to fall in our lap as the preferred route for its construction. Much as we would like to have it go somewhere else (i.e., impact some other neighborhood instead of our own), it will be coming through our city as outlined. While it is not possible to evenly distribute the pain of the construction process equally throughout every resident and business in Lemon Grove, that pain can and will be lessened. Also, there are commitments for over two million dollars worth of improvement for the entire city. If traffic lights, streets and other amenities are provided by the Water District, it will free up that much of our own income to be spent elsewhere in town, and broad benefits will result. The guarantees of access by safety vehicles, protection for off-site parking were needed, and the minimizing of noise, dirt and regular service disruption, have been often repeated and will be honored. These mitigations are necessary because the benefit of water transported by this conduit will benefit a much wider area than those areas affected by the construction of it. Thus, the costs will be spread over all of the users, as it should be. The water is urgently and vitally indeed.

The construction of highways seems to be a sacred monolithic thing that moves with an insensitive momentum. I have been involved with public transportation (MTDB) for over ten years now, and believe that we should be building more trolleys than highways. Getting people out of cars and into public transportation will clean up our befouled air, will decrease our dependency on oil, reduce highway congestion, an reduce the pressure on our incomes. I do not believe that just building more freeways ad infinitum, will do anything other than just make matters worse. It also uses precious funds that could be better spent for the public good. So that is the big difference between these two projects, and why I feel as I do.

Progress, when it truly is beneficial and is needed to benefit the majority, will always be injurious to some. Hopefully, the planning will limit that harm to an absolute minimum. If that is the case, and some of the "old and beautiful residences along Golden and Crane" must be sacrificed, then sadly it will have to be I would also state that in such an event, the people who lose their homes should be fully compensated for their property and be satisfactorily relocated. As with the pipeline, they are to suffer individually for the greater benefit of the many by implementing the service of the freeway extension. I guess my patronizing attitude is dampened by my reluctance to be as totally in favor of the highway as I am the water pipe.

My home is about equidistant between the two projects, and other than a few detours, will not be affected by either, so my feelings are not selfish unless you consider my anguish for friends who will be impacted. I do not know for sure, but I probably have just as many friends on Mass. Ave., on San Miguel, Palm and Skyline as I have on Golden and Crane. No homes will be taken by the pipeline, but many will either be taken or adversely impacted permanently by the highway.

A call for support

After many years of peace, we again find our nation involved in war. It seems to this writer that the most compelling duty that we have, as Americans, is to support our leaders. With the media coverage that instantly shows our face to the entire world, it is imperative that we do nothing to endanger our country and especially our own people who are putting their lives on the line in the Middle East.

Nobody wants war nor the attending horrors that are sure to be the products of armed conflict. Those Americans who have actually experienced the service and the sorrows of their wars should be heeded by those who have not. Rhetoric and rationalization cannot dispel or wish away all displeasing prospects.

Regardless of political persuasion, or of personal philosophy, it is time for ALL of us to pledge our allegiance and support to our leaders in this time of world crisis.

We have elected the best that we have, under the best system in the world, to make decisions for us, and where majority rules, we should unanimously rally behind them. This is not a time for talk-show chatterboxes, for movie stars or for media personages who are pumped up by high salaries and TV exposure into thinking that an attentive audience is certification to their divine wisdom. The loudest mouths that expound on military strategy and tactics seem to come from the entertainment industry, many without ever serving a day in uniform or a minute in defense of our country.

Monday morning quarterbacking is the most popular game in the world, and certainly, the safest. Wimpy, in the old Popeye cartoons used to say, "Let's you and him fight. I'll hold your coat." How many Wimpys are now having profound impacts on our foreign policy? How many idealists are ignoring the oft repeated lessons of history and influencing the "turn the other cheek" philosophy in the face of global bullying today? How many of us are afraid to take a stand on anything today because of the fear of litigation or offending someone, somewhere?

I fully support the President, and our leaders to do the right thing. We voted for them, and should back them up to do the best that they can. I cannot squeeze into my old uniform, but I can pray, in the Navy way:

Eternal Father, strong to save, whose arm hath bound the restless wave,

Who biddest the mighty ocean deep, its own appointed limits keep:

O' hear us when we cry to Thee for those in peril on the sea!

Lord guard and judge the men who fly through the great spaces in the sky,

Be with them always in the air, in darkening storms or sunlight fair.

O' hear us when we lift our prayer for this in peril in the air!

O' trinity of love and power, our brethren shield in dangers hour:

From rock and tempest, fire and foe, protect them wheresoever they go:

Thus evermore shall rise to Thee, glad Praise from air and land and sea.

Amen.

Whatever the next few hours bring, I pray to God that we're on the side of right. And I also pray that all Americans will unite and be resolute in support of our country with being and spirit.

Commentary

Staying the course

by Paul Treske

It is simply not going to be as easy as we thought.

The euphoria engendered by the first 48 hours of the Allied attack on Iraq has been replaced by the sobering knowledge that the war will not be cheaply won.

Saddam Hussein has made excellent use of the five months between the invasion of Kuwait and the January 15 deadline. He has dug in deeply, husbanded his resources and apparently planned diversions that have kept his opponents off guard.

His "Scud" efforts to bring Israel into the war as a wedge between the United States and the Arab Allies have thus far failed due to the careful wisdom of the Israelis. His letting loose an oil spill that will have tragic effects regionally for years to come has not deterred our purpose. And the smoke from the burning Kuwaiti oil refineries only temporarily covered the area.

We have won air superiority and have, hopefully, put an end to Saddam's nuclear potential. In short, it would seem that bombs and missiles have done what they can do. Thus, ultimately, the war must be won on the ground and that phase will surely come soon. With that phase will come the first substantial casualties and it is at that point that the American public must hold fast. Polls have shown an overwhelming public support for the President's policy. But some have suggested that this support is "a mile wide and an inch deep." One suspects that there may be some truth in this.

Despite now overwhelming evidence of Saddam's evil capacities, many thousands still march, naively shouting to "bring them home now." Should the eventual ground and sea assault bog down with a dramatic rise in casualties, those thousands will grow to hundreds of thousands. At that time the true strength of our national resolve will be tested. And this time, it must not fail!

Today's super patriotic fervor seems somehow to be too easy, too filled with chest-thumping and bragging. What is needed is quiet, deep resolution that promises that the job will be done no matter what. Difficult days are ahead, days that may see new Iraqi ploys. Chemical and biological warfare may yet have to be fought.

Saddam Hussein has often stated that he thinks American cannot "stay the course." In the not so easy days ahead, we must prove this to be false. Much of the world's future shape will depend on it. There is much potential for upheaval among the Arab masses. Saddam Hussein remains an unbelievably vibrant hero to millions in the world.

Should he succeed because our resolve fails, he will gather a whirlwind around him that will be almost impossible to contain.

From Where I Sit

The High Cost of Living

by Frank Andrews

Wow! My monthly electric bill is now in the "three figures." I can remember when the power company charged a $2 monthly minimum and we hardly ever went over that. Of course, that was many-moons ago and many electric appliances less.

Can you name all the new-fangled electric gadgets that we have accumulated in the twentieth century? Some are very beneficial to our living, but some just make us lazier than we ought to be.

Electric toothbrushes, remote controls for nearly every appliance, mixers, knives, can openers, hair dryers, just to mention a few. I am as guilty as anyone for taking advantage of the modern age, but it does cost big bucks to "live high on the hog."

I can still remember the gas lights of my grandmother's old mansion. The Aladdin kerosene lamps were a thing of beauty and graced many a living room, besides giving off plenty of light to read by. When she hooked up to the new power, the lights were the only thing electric thus the $2 minimum.

Wash-day was a big day; all the clothes had to be soaked overnight and then rubbed vigorously on the old time "scrub board." The rinsed clean clothes were then hung out in the sunlight and gentle breezes to gain a freshness not obtainable with any machine.

To keep perishables at least for a couple days, we depended on the "ice box." "The Iceman Cometh" every other day to deposit a piece of lake ice in our box. It kept food cool when it was "cool to be cool." We now have a huge combo "fridge" and freezer, that even spits ice cubes and cold water out its door.

Wrapped warm bricks were placed in bed at our feet to help make it through the night It was the job of the first one awake to start a fire in the stove and jump back under the covers until the house had warmed up a little. The up-to-date automatic-timed thermostats coupled with our modern-day heating plants, even eliminate emptying the ashes.

My dear old father had larceny in his blood, which would account for his "taking" ways. He seemed to delight in snitching something for nothing. During the $2 minimum era of electricity, "Pops" invented a wire gimmick that he would jam up into the meter to bypass the electricity. We cooked and did everything possible at the time, but never paid over the minimum. When the meter-reading day of the month came around, it was my job to stay close by so I could retrieve the wire gimmick in a hurry. Pop went to the slammer a few times, but never for swiping kilowatts.

All this makes one wonder, was life better in the inexpensive "good old days," or is it better now, when we pay the price for the "high cost of high living."

Football season finally over - Or is it?

by John E. Wirges

Super Bowl XXV is in the books. The New York Football Giants of New Jersey shaded the upstart, upstate Buffalo Bills by a single point (20-19) in a game that was much more boring than the closeness of the score would have us believe.

The Giants played a slowdown, ball control kind of game that all but took them out of contention. They were down 12-3 late in the first half and another Buffalo score would have forced them out of their "keep the clock running" game plan.

It wasn't until quarterback Jeff "Hoss" Hostetler directed the underdog (by 7 points) Giants to a 10-play 87-yard scoring drive with 25 seconds left in the half that New York coach Bill Parcells got to breathing easy again.

The Giants controlled the ball for 40:33 of the game, leaving the Bills on offense for just 19:27. Still, Marv Levy's Buffalo battlers almost pulled it out.

Bills field general Jim Kelly hustled his team down field in quick march fashion to give Buffalo kicker Scott Norwood a chance from the Giants 47 yard line with 8 seconds left.

Norwood's kick was long enough, but it sailed wide right, and the Giants became football's Champions of the Planet Earth.

And that's it, huh? The Giants are champions and the season is over. Right? Oh, how wrong can you be.

Football isn't a game. It's a way of life. From very humble beginnings within the lifetime of many senior fans, football has grown to become a force in the woof and warp of life.

And you just don't close the door on woof and warp forces of life with a quick slam and a "thank-you, m'am."

National Football League behemoths of both the American and National conferences are testing the turf on Honolulu Stadium this week in preparation for Sunday's Pro-Bowl game.

Die-hard fans get one last chance to suds up and cool down to the clash and smash of football gladiators performing their heroic deeds in TV's living color and radio's colorful word pictures across the land and around the world.

ESPN will carry the commercial TV package and the Armed Forces Radio and Televison network will carry the game to the troops and ship's companies mustering in hot spots and not-so-hot spots across the seas and around the world.

"Ok," you say, "Is that it? Is the Pro-Bowl the last football game of this season?"

In a way, yes. The playing of the Pro-Bowl signals the last football action for this season. But that doesn't mean what you think it means. Or even what it used to mean.

The new season starts and professional "off-season" football becomes a reality on March 23 when the World Football League kicks off the 1991 season with games in the U.S. and Europe.

The NFL's 1991 college football player's draft will be held April 21 and 22 and the Aztecs go into spring practice shortly after that. And, that's just for openers. There's more. Just to keep the pot boiling, there's the little matter of where Super Bowl XXVII will be played (San Diego is a strong contender for the game) and expansion. Two more teams are to be added by next year. The football season never really ends. Never.

The Chocolate Chip Solution by Joseph Walker

A month or so ago, my wife and I were sitting in a darkened theater, trying to regain our composure after experiencing Kevin Costner's brilliant Western epic, "Dance With Wolves."

In fact, I was so profoundly moved by the movie's powerful message that it was about 15 minutes before I could even speak.

I suspect the current world situation had a lot to do with that. Not that there are a lot of parallels between the ongoing crisis in the Middle East and Costner's respectful portrayal of Native Americans and their frontier conflict with white settlers. But in my mind, the movie became even more poignant because of one basic question that can be applied equally to both the "Dances With Wolves" historical setting and to our war against Iraq: "Why can't people just get along with each other?

I guess that question has been on people's lips ever since ... well, ever since people have had lips. So, it should come as no surprise when we struggle with the issue after a thought-provoking film or watching the late news with the latest example of mankind's inability to peacefully co-exist. And we wonder why it has to be this way, especially since we can remember the time when, as children, we could get along with just about anybody.

What did we know then that we seem somehow to have forgotten over the years?

Quite a lot, as it turns out. At least, that's the way it seemed to me after I had a chance to discuss the situation with a group of five and six year-olds.

I visited their class because I was concerned about how they were dealing with the frightening turn of world events. And as it turned out, I did most of the learning from their simple, direct approach to human relationships.

"Saddam must be very angry," observed Benjamin, who added: "Maybe, he just isn't happy. Has someone been mean to him?"

Children understand anger. They've seen it and they've experienced it. They even understand fighting. They just don't understand carrying a grudge around. They get angry, they fight - and then forget about it.

"Did someone tell him he should stop?" Vanessa wanted to know. When informed that yes, indeed he had been warned, she pressed on; "Well, did someone tell his mom - she would make him stop?"

But what if she couldn't? Then what?

"Invite him to your house so you can be better friends," said J.B.

"Make something nice for him," said Melissa.

"Tell him you won't play with him if he doesn't stop hurting people," said Tiffany.

"Share your cookies with him," said Ashley. "That's what I do."

OK, OK -- so maybe it's a little late for that as far as the current crisis is concerned. But, perhaps the next crisis can be avoided if we adults learn a little something from our children. That means all of us - not just the decision-makers. We've got to stop thinking in terms of "friends" and enemies." Reach out to all people with acceptance and consideration. Try to get to know and understand them better. Respect differences and embrace commonalty.

And if everything else fails, break out the chocolate chips.

Hard work pays off for Helix athlete

by Shelly Jones

Senior Karrie Downey received the honor of being chosen for First Team All American for volleyball and for Second Team in Volleyball Monthly.

Downey has been playing volley ball since her freshman year. Not only is she involved in high school volleyball, but she is also a member of the San Diego Volleyball Club.

At the age of 16, Downey was chosen for Second Team All American in the 16 and under division. Now, at 17, she has been chosen for First Team All American by the USA Today and Mizuno.

Helix was listed as one of the top 25 schools in the nation for volleyball, and while speaking to Mike Welch, Downey's volleyball coach at Helix, the USA Today and Mizuno committee found out about Downey and her volleyball talents.

Volleyball Monthly has been paying close attention to Downey's high school volleyball, as well as her involvement at the Volleyball Club. They chose Downey for the second team for the 1990 K-Swiss High School Girl's All American.

Downey said that she was excited when she first got the news. "It was a complete shock to me. I had no idea it was even possible for me to be chosen," she said.

Downey hopes to continue her volleyball career and has received full scholarships from the University of Colorado, the University of Arizona and Nebraska State.

Even though Downey's burning desire is to play volleyball and go to the Olympics, she would like to have a career in eduction. According to Downey, education is important and although the school and the teachers are important, the "students make the education, not the school or even the teachers; students make the education within themselves."

Of course, Downey wouldn't give up volleyball! She would also like to be a volleyball coach on the side. "I love playing volleyball and I want to help spread the interest. Recently, interest in volleyball has grown and I would like to see it continue to grow."

"It's exciting to watch Karrie play. I will miss her next year, but I know she will make it and go far," Welch said.

Masons aid troops in the Gulf

Nightly forays into the Saudi Arabian desert to visit U.S. front-line troops are being made by members of the Masonic Lodge located in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, according to Beryl Harris, worshipful master of Lemon Grove Masonic Lodge #736.

The "Host a Soldier" program involves inviting soldiers to lodge members' homes, providing them with showers and a home-cooked meal, as well as letting them wash their clothing. After a relaxing time with the host family, the soldiers return to their units. Harris said that over 3,500 soldiers have benefited from the visits, with lodge members handling from 150 to 280 soldiers each night.

The Saudi Arabian lodge members have also instituted a "Meals on Wheels" program which involves the preparing and delivering of hot meals for the armed escorts who accompany the soldiers visiting the hosts.

The members also use their own four-wheel drive vehicles to transport ice, soft drinks, iced tea, Gatorade and water to front-line troops as part of another volunteer program, "Operation Desert Outreach." Over tons of ice and 5,000 cans of soda have already been delivered, along with many books, videos, baseball gear and games, all paid for by lodge members through fund-raising activities.

The Masonic Lodge in Saudi Arabia is a constituent lodge of the American-Canadian Grand Lodge of Germany.

Water Shortage

notes that, compounding this, there are now six million more people in California than in 1976 -77. Furthermore, in 1991, Southern California's allocation of water from the Colorado River, its other major source of water, has been reduced by 3 million acre-feet.

For local residents, Friedgen sees grave problems and significant lifestyle changes ahead. Serious cuts in agricultural water supplies may reduce farm productivity, and the eventual curtailing of housing construction would have a drastic effect on the San Diego economy.

The problem is so serious statewide, says Friedgen, that the water contractors have asked Governor Wilson to declare a statewide state of emergency.
